

CITY HAS QUIET ARMISTICE DAY

Chief Interest in Game at Madison—Whitewater Dedicates Memorial.

Four years ago Saturday the signing of the armistice which brought to a speedy conclusion the world war, was the cause of the most hilarious and joyous celebration ever seen in Janesville. Saturday there is little celebration, with interest concentrated chiefly on the football battle between the University of Wisconsin and Illinois at Madison.

Local posts throughout southern Wisconsin Friday had a celebration at their post headquarters, and at Whitewater an appropriate memorial to the heroes of the three world wars was dedicated at the park.

Other cities plan observance in the churches Sunday. A special service will be held at the Methodist church here Saturday night in 1918.

Mailed by reports received Thursday, four days before the armistice had been signed, some persons were somewhat surprised when the news came that at 1:30 a. m. Monday, Nov. 11, 1918, that an armistice had been signed and the firing would cease at 11 o'clock. France, Belgium, Italy, Japan, and the United States, and the celebration was held at that early hour. Business houses were closed by proclamation of Charles H. Valentine, who called "the greatest parade ever seen in Janesville."

Charles S. Putnam was marshal of the day and the patriotic spirit predominated. The knifer was hanged and buried and many were called up for speeches.

The Rev. S. J. Morris will give an appropriate address Sunday on Armistice day at Fort Atkinson.

The Lutheran church in Madison will celebrate Armistice day Friday night with a banquet to the baseball team.

The Broadhead Post, Swann Club, No. 197, held a dinner and service men were entertained Friday night by the Madison lodge, following a custom started the year after the end of the war. Harold Bagshaw was the new adjutant and C. L. S. was the new adjutant.

Plan Chorus of Girls to Sing Christmas Songs

A committee to arrange for the singing of Christmas carols by a girls' chorus as a part of the community Christmas program, was named at meeting of the Council of Girls' Agencies, Friday afternoon. It is not intended that these carols will take the place of the carol singing which has been throughout the city in past years but to bring together in a large chorus all of the groups that may be willing to cooperate by learning a uniform set of carols as a part of their own Christmas observance. Miss Margaret Donahue, community girls' work secretary, will assist the committee which is as follows: Mrs. Allen F. Lovejoy, chairman; Mrs. Edna Snyder, Carl Deans, J. R. Jensen and Harry Claxton.

Representatives of different agencies gave reports of activities and suggestions as to ways in which the girls' groups, Mrs. Edna Snyder, who represents St. Mary's church, reported that the Young Ladies' Society would be glad to utilize the services of Miss Doane. Chiropractic Plus Nature Equals Health

It may not be proper to classify Chiropractic alone, since it is a part of Nature—a natural process of keeping fit.

There is nothing new or revolutionary to Chiropractic adjustments. They are now as they have been for thousands of years, a part of the natural system which aboriginal peoples use to keep their bodily processes normal.

The Chiropractor restores the offending vertebrae to normal position in the spine, relieving the pressure, and Nature restores health and normality to the body.

We will be glad to tell you frankly just what Chiropractic adjustments will or will not do in your case. See us today.

Chiropractic For Rheumatism
Pressure upon nerves at the point where they exit from the spine causes an abnormal functioning of the organs or parts supplied by those nerves. If the nerves affected are the ones supplying the organs of elimination the waste and poisons which are normally thrown off or eliminated from the body are left to accumulate within the system. These poisons working into the cells and tissues of the body gradually work a structural change and if allowed to progress form tiny crystals in the body tissues. The joints, muscles, etc., may be affected, and the suffering produced be very severe.

The Chiropractor removes the pressure which the misaligned vertebrae produce on the nerves which control the organs of elimination. When these organs receive their normal amount of nervous energy or mental impulse they function normally. The poisons are thrown off, the crystal formation being dissolved, and the normal lymph and blood supply is again established. Continued suffering in the face of incontrovertible proof that the Chiropractor does overcome rheumatism by Spinal Adjustments is foolhardy.

The Standard of Comparison

The Buick They Judge By

The Model "45" Six Cylinder Touring—$1195

The famous Buick five-passenger, six cylinder open model today, as in past years, sets the standard of automobile value.

It is the motor car by which others are judged because it represents the best of each year's developments in mechanical refinements, appearance and riding comfort.

The Buick Model "45" combines the characteristic Buick qualities of performance and stability with distinctive beauty and a completeness of appointments not to be found elsewhere.

We'll be pleased to give you a demonstration any time.

Better Body Construction

Braces in the body frames of Buick open models are bolted through the wooden frame work instead of being merely screwed into it. Bolting these braces prevents the joints from loosening under driving strains. Note how the brackets for the windshield posts are bolted in seven places, making it absolutely rigid. In mounting the bodys on the chassis more bolts are used to secure the body.

The Buick Line for 1923 Comprises Fourteen Models:

Four—2 Pass. Roadster, $865; 5 Pass. Touring, $885; 3 Pass. Coupe, $1175; 5 Pass. Sedan, $1395; 5 Pass. Touring Sedan, $1535; Six—2 Pass. Roadster, $1175; 5 Pass. Touring, $1195; 5 Pass. Touring Sedan, $1395; 5 Pass. Sedan, $1595; 4 Pass. Coupe, $1895; 7 Pass. Touring, $1435; 7 Pass. Sedan, $2195; Sport Roadster, $1925; Sport Touring, $1975. Prices C. & D. Buick factories. How Radiators Get Leaky

Improper Supporting, Impure Water And Freezing Are To Be Avoided

A RADIATOR CONSISTS of two parts, the core or "business" part of it, through which the heated water and cooling air circulate and the shell, within which the core is fastened and by which the whole construction is supported on the car frame. A "cellular" radiator core (exclusive of the upper and lower tanks and sides) is built up of short, small diametered, horizontal thin brass air-tubes, each end of each tube being expanded into a hexagon shaped flange, which two sets of flanges are soldered compactly together. The water flows downward through the numerous thin spaces left between the cylindrical or unexpanded portions of the tubes and air blows through the tubes. The whole core is held together and made watertight by soldering and if any of these joints fail it will leak. The shell is supposed to support and protect the core which is weak mechanically, from the effects of vibration and jolts; but if the former is not securely fastened to and somewhat cushioned on the frame, if the fastenings between shell and core are not tight or if the shell itself is severely overstressed, forces may reach the core that will break the solder and start leaks. If water containing mineral salts is used, there may be galvanic action started between the solder and the brass, and these metals may waste away and some of the joints fail. Corrosive solutions may even eat through the tubes. If a radiator is allowed to freeze, bursting pressures develop in the water spaces between tubes, and the soldered joints at the flanged tube ends are sometimes torn apart. As it is usually a failed soldered joint, which causes a leak, resoldering is the obvious remedy and the only dependable one, but when water leaks into the tubes, plugging their ends is resorted to. Plugging leaks from the inside, with materials that are put into suspension in the radiator water and get caught as they are leaking out, is not a recommended practice.

PERSISTENT BEARING TROUBLE

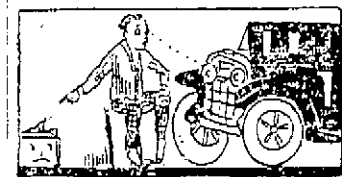

V. S. writes: Recently the center main bearing of my engine burned out and, since that time, this bearing has burned out three times. It has been suggested that my crankshaft has been sprung, but I do not know when this could have happened. I have also been advised to have all main bearings replaced to make sure they line up. What can you suggest?

Answer: First make sure that the oil supply to this bearing is not obstructed in any way, by proving that the oil due from the splash-collecting pocket on the bearing bracket actually delivers oil to the inside of the bushing and that the distribution grooves are open and receive oil. If no trouble is disclosed there, you might as well have the crankshaft removed and tested for alignment of its bearing parts, and for their perfect roundness and freedom from roughness and, if anything is wrong, have the necessary truing up done or get a new shaft. When you are sure the shaft is O. K. you better replace all the main bearings, have a very careful scraping-in job done and run the engine idle long enough to wear the bearings in, using an excess of oil.

LIGHTS WITHOUT A BATTERY

J. W. H. asks: What changes will I have to make in the electrical system of my car so that, with the storage battery removed, I can still operate the lights from my generator, while the engine is running?

Answer: Have a switch installed on the cow-board, connected into the field circuit of the generator, so that when this switch is open the generator will not excite and when it is closed, it will build up to normal voltage. Leave all the light switches closed all the time and, when you wish to throw on the lights, close the field circuit switch above referred to. Any capable electrical man can install this field control for you.

THE HAND OF AMERICA.
May we turn aside a moment from the political situation, the league of nations, the contemplation of the deprecation of the mark, the ravages of the Turk and the discontent of the Hindoo, to more pleasant things, in spite of the pessimist and the persons who have nut sundries for interior head decoration instead of brains, this old world is a heap sight better today than it was yesterday. We have made a million or so people happy by getting the hook worm out of their system; we have turned yellow fever so that it keeps its distance and no longer sticks its tawny head in the front doors of the homes of tropics and sub-tropics; we have squelched the plague so that its ravages are confined to a small district and kept out of the far corners; we have healed the leper and made him hope and live to die of old age or in the regular course of other humans by auto accident, and now comes news of what Americans have done in Afghanistan and the regions of the Don. Where are these places that Americans should be present? Why in the interior of Russia, in the primitive, half-nomadic, half-civilized part of Southwestern Europe—the homes of the Don, Cossacks and the Nomads of Kalmyk—six million people have been practically freed from typhus, a destroyer of thousands in the last two years. Cholera too has been checked and an epidemic of bubonic plague has been stamped out.
What of politics and recognition and soviet and entanglements! The ministering hand of America reaches into the dark corners of the world, brings the sunlight of health and saves life—not intrigues to kill more people or add provinces and population to its territory, nor does it care what race it is that it succeeds so long as it is humanitarian. How better that a nation should thus impress itself upon the world than it should quarrel over divine right or boundaries of inconsequential provinces!

Morgan failed to win out for governor in Kansas. This seems to have been a hard year on the Morgans.

IT WAS EVER THUS.
Old Commodore Vanderbilt laughed a button off his vest when he heard that an elevated railroad for New York was proposed. The Philadelphia Ledger calls attention to a statement in the Boston Courier in 1827, in which that paper weighed against the Boston and Albany railroad proposal. "The project of a railroad between Boston and Albany is impracticable and the expense would be a little less than the value of the whole of the territory of Massachusetts," it said. Farmers screamed when a turnpike was proposed to Lancaster, Penna. from nearby counties. So has wagged the world. We have had holy horror folks on everything that has ever been proposed in the progress of the people. But man is a peculiarly stubborn and mulish animal and keeps right on with vision and action. Some day we will have Route 20 paved west of Janesville.

Henry Ford has not yet told us how to meet the Turk situation.

IT WOULD BE A MISTAKE.
News dispatches are to the effect that President Harding is contemplating the appointment of Senator Alton Pomerene recently defeated for reelection to the United States senate, to succeed Justice of the Supreme Court William R. Day. While it may be that the president wants to do something for an Ohio friend, who while a democrat has always been on the best of terms with his neighbor from Marion, it would seem to be a great political error to name Mr. Pomerene in the face of a defeat which was brought about largely by the attitude of the senator on labor questions. It could only serve to still further arouse labor organizations. Administration support of Newberry has proved to be a grievous error and has been paid for in loss of senatorships. The naming of Pomerene will be another error almost as equally potent in making for negative votes. That is the political side of the matter. Also there are many demands in the United States learned in the law, standing high at the bar or in the judiciary who are better fitted to sit in judgment in the highest court than a man who has devoted most of his life to politics.

Turkey may have removed the Sultan but retains its fall.

OHIO AND THE WET REFERENDUM.
Ohio furnished the only genuine contest over the question of light wines and beer and the dry vote was 137,354 in the majority. In Illinois, while there was a so-called referendum, the dry forces refused to accept its legality and refrained generally from voting. In California there was a partial issue in a new liquor law and that was carried in the election, and is conceded as a victory for the dry voters.
Ohio was made the wet battle ground. Thompson, the defeated candidate for governor, straddled the issue and was defeated. Simeon Press, openly and above-board a dry advocate, was elected as against Pomerene who has consistently voted wet in the senate. Within its borders, Ohio has six large cities, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Toledo, Dayton, Akron and Columbus with a number of other cities of from 25,000 to 100,000 in population. So as a real test Ohio would furnish

The Nation's Southern Main Street.

By FREDERICK J. HASKIN

Washington.—Recent action by a county in Oklahoma in voting a bond issue of several hundred thousand dollars to construct a link in the Lee highway is concrete evidence of the progress that is being made in the enterprise which is to give the country another transcontinental road. It is a demonstration of the kind of cooperation on the part of the states and counties that insures success to the project fostered by the organization known as the Lee Highway association.
This great artery of travel by motor has been termed the Southern Main Street of the United States. Its promoters claim for it that it will be the finest scenic route from coast to coast as well as the shortest. From Washington to San Diego, California, it will measure 3,000 miles, which is 300 miles less than any other route. Eventually it is said, the Lee highway will be extended from Washington to New York City and from San Diego to San Francisco, giving it a total length of 7,700 miles.
It is estimated that the road will afford highway transportation to at least 10,000,000 people, approximately one-seventh of our continental population. This will contribute materially to the development of a zone at least 100 miles wide throughout its entire length. This is regarded as of far more importance than the facility it will offer to tin-canners and other tourists to travel from the Atlantic to the Pacific through much of the most beautiful scenery in the country as well as over a comparatively easy roadway.
Experts say there is no measuring the socially beneficent influences of good roads and one authority recently asserted they really constituted a counter agent against dangerous radicalism. "The happy homes induced by automobiles and good roads," he said, "are incompatible with radicalism and unrest."

Whether or not that theory will be generally accepted, those who are behind the Lee highway association are convinced that they are engaged in a great public service and they are gratified with the cooperation their project is receiving. Moreover, they can point with pride to the progress that has been made.
Every mile of the road is now a connected highway, they announce, and can be traveled any day in the year—in fact, it is all in daily use. It is estimated that approximately 80 per cent of it is graded and that all the necessary bridges and culverts have been constructed. Some of this roadway is of the type known as waterbound macadam, but this will be replaced ultimately with scientifically built pavement.

From almost every county seat along the line there is a stretch of this modern road, extending in either direction, and in some instances this permanent roadway is continuous for 200 miles. There are of course breaks in its continuity, but the association is now negotiating a construction program under which the road authorities of the various states and counties will cooperate to close all the gaps. It is hoped that this can be accomplished within the next two years, assuming that conditions continue favorable.
The Lee Highway runs southwest from Washington, traversing the Valley of Virginia, thence west to cross the Mississippi River at Memphis, from Memphis it runs to Little Rock, Arkansas, and follows the magnificent Red River Valley of southern Oklahoma, then on through western Texas, southern New Mexico, Arizona and California to San Diego.

The route from the Mississippi on is practically one of the five transcontinental lines surveyed by order of congress during the period immediately preceding the Civil war when it was realized that the territory gained as result of the Mexican war and by the acquisition of California could only be consolidated through lines of transportation linking the Pacific coast to the Mississippi valley and thence with the Atlantic seaboard. Old records indicate that this route was regarded as the most feasible as well as the most desirable, but when the war between the states came on the line from Omaha to San Francisco was adopted for the first railroad to be built across the continent.

The Lee highway follows beautiful rivers and streams for more miles than any other road in the world. It is claimed, and offers a combination of mountain and valley scenery of unusual beauty and variety. From the Potomac river southward to the Mississippi the way lies through a great mountain valley which is marked by the Blue Ridge and Unaka mountain ranges on the east and by the Allegheny-Cumberland range on the west. This valley is crossed transversely by a series of ridges which are not high enough to form mountain barriers, but constitute watersheds for streams flowing in a northwesterly or southwesterly direction.

The valley of Virginia has been a great thoroughfare since the early settlement of that section. Along it passed the pioneers from the old sections of Virginia and other states who settled the mountainous parts of West Virginia, northern Tennessee and parts of Kentucky. It was the shortest route from Charlotte, North Carolina, to New York. And before the days of the railroad was generally used by southerners who had occasion to journey north.
Thus this valley presents a wealth of historical interest dating back to early colonial days. It includes battle grounds that were the arenas for some of the fiercest fighting of the Civil war, the achievements of the men of the Civil war, the achievements of the men of the Civil war, the achievements of the men of the Civil war.

Along with the construction of the road the Lee Highway association purposes the carrying on of an educational campaign in which the history, geography, literature, industries, natural resources and attractions of the zone traversed by the highway will be made generally known. This will fit into the "Seeing America First" propaganda. Naturally the business element in every community along the line is interested in this program and is cooperating in every possible way.

President Harding has enrolled himself among the good road boosters in a recent letter to the Highway Education Board. He declared the question of transportation to be among "the most pressing and difficult problems the entire world is facing" and stated with all possible emphasis that "the country needs good roads and more of them."

"Transportation facilities of the world, whether by rail or water or whether represented by the great network of public highways, have been confronted with a most difficult situation for years," said the president. "It is one which demands the very best and widest treatment from the standpoint of technical, economic and financial authorities."
A battle ground where the case could be settled without a sharp division between country and city voters. No one would expect that the city of New York would vote otherwise than "wet." New York is scarcely an American city. It has an alien born population of a heterogeneous sort, not well acquainted with America beyond what may be seen in the canyons of a metropolis. The real American is unknown to them. Illinois too, has something of the same character of population in its Chicago and here also law means little beyond a policeman's uniform. It is where the citizen is an abider by law because it is the law and not from fear of the officers of the law that we get the genuine American. Ohio may be called typical of such a state and there are many others like her. Thus Ohio's vote is quite conclusive as to how such a people vote on booze and beer.

ACCOMMODATING A LADY.
When I was young my parents said respectfully to me:
"The male unto the female sex must always courteous be."
My father dwelt on this at large, he talked it day and night:
"Unto the ladies gentlemen would always be polite."
So when she asked of me to play, although my bridge is shaky,
I undertook to play the game just to oblige the lady.

It seems they had to have the fourth, but three of them there were
And so I took the vacant chair obliging them
And her.
A pleading look was in her eye, so graciously she smiled
She seemed to be as tender and as winsome as a child:
And though of bridge I little know without much hesitating
Her partner I agreed to be—to be accommodated.

"A half a cent a point," said she, for cash the lady played;
But since she shared the risk with me why should I be afraid?
She seemed as gentle as a child—I've used that phrase before.
But when I trumped her king of hearts you should have heard her roar;
And hate and rage and ugly looks the gracious lady shed me
When I threw out a diamond card and not the spade she led me.

I did not ask to join the game, I had a book to read;
I merely heard a lady's plan and played the friend in need;
Yet, oh the bitter things she said, and hateful things she did
The time she did two clubs and then I left her with her bid!
Perhaps my dear old dad was right, but bridge I never played her
It cost me seventy dollars to accommodate a lady!

OPINIONS OF OTHERS

What Election Means to Wisconsin.

There are many thousands of citizens who are previously disappointed by the result of the election, and it must be admitted that there is a marked reaction of depression. We are not to expect a marked reaction of investment in Wisconsin enterprises, of industrial development, of commercial progress for some time to come. The vast majority of men of affairs, in business and industry of large, to people and things in general, will have to run its course. When it will subside no one can say, and what it will do or undo while it is in the saddle, no one can say. Certainly, however, it is hard to know that sanity as well as justice will prevail. There is no occasion for illfeeling, for that never gets those who bear it very far. Whatever those in power in the state of Wisconsin undertake to do for the good of the state, they will be supported in good faith, whatever it is undertaken that is bad must be resisted, though peacefully and goodnaturedly.—Green Bay Press Gazette.

Nov. 11, 1902.—A Kodophone is showing at the Myers theater and drawing much attention, showing different views each night. They are clear, as far as motion pictures go, and the blur is reduced to a minimum. Scenes are of famous mountains, while some dancing is shown. All eyes are now turned in the direction of Spring Brook, where there is so much building activity.

Personal Health Service

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

Noted Physician and Author

WHY BATTLE INTERNALLY.

The popular notion of auto-intoxication is a vague poisoning of the blood or system by some waste matter which has not been completely eliminated from the bowels. Of course such poisoning may occur in rare instances of intestinal obstruction, but certainly it does not occur in every case of constipation or imaginary constipation. In fact, it is the true conception of auto-intoxication, which isn't, there would be little gained by washing out the lower bowel, even if it could be considered cleansing. In any sense, it is the absorption of waste matter from the lower bowel, it is silly to imagine that there is any such poisoning of the system associated with ordinary constiveness or constipation. It is the absorption of waste matter from the bowels, but certainly it does not occur in every case of constipation, aside from prevention which is another question, almost any of the commonest used tablets, pills or yarb physics would, in less judicious, habitually employed, than cathartics or injections are.

If there is any real foundation for the hypothesis of auto-intoxication, which is doubtful, then it is something far from the absorption of waste matter from the bowels. By auto-intoxication the physician understands a retention in the blood or system, not in the intestinal canal, of waste matter or the natural byproducts of metabolism, the oxidation or conduction process which constitutes life. No phylis or injection can influence such auto-intoxication. The cause is a vicious habit and if persisted in for any length of time it brings on conditions far worse than the real or imaginary "auto-intoxication" would have without treatment at all. A dilation and weakening of the bowel is likely to be induced by constant use of cathartics, and the victim becomes a chronic hypochondriac.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

San Baths for Tuberculosis.
I am a young girl and have been for two years trying to conquer tuberculosis. I have a good doctor but he encourages me to take sun baths. I have tried this but I feel so many, and even doctors, advise me not to take them. What is your opinion? What possible harm can they do? Please advise me as to some literature on sex hygiene that a young girl should read. My mother died of TB when I was quite young. (W. E. T.)

Answer.—I should advise you by all means to take the sun baths, which you should be able to do most days of the year in your section of Tennessee.

Q. Have persimmons any food value? What can be made of them? J. E. W.

Answer.—Of the fruits grown in the United States persimmons are out-ranked in food value by dates only. Before the advent of the white man the Indians made a kind of bread by mixing persimmons with water and sugar. Breads, cake, pudding, ice cream and candy may be made of persimmons. They may be preserved whole, or as a persimmon pulp, or made into persimmon jam.

Q. Is there a difference between consumption and tuberculosis? S. H. E.

Answer.—Consumption is an old-fashioned word which was used for the late stage of tuberculosis when the lungs were wasting away, or being consumed, and it was confined to the disease of the lungs. Tuberculosis nowadays does not mean what consumption used to mean, because the word is usually made the diagnosis much earlier when the hope of early cure is very much brighter. All consumption is tuberculosis, but all tuberculosis is not consumption. A bet that no one has a right to demand a cut of the cards in poker if the player next to the dealer is a dealer's right cut. The Black Menace

A CRAIG KENNEDY STORY

By ARTHUR B. REEVES.

The story of the Black Menace has to do with the fortunes of Craig Kennedy, a young man who, after a long and perilous journey, has arrived in the city of New York. He is a detective, and his mission is to solve the mystery of the Black Menace, a crime which has baffled the police. The story is told by a companion and friend of Kennedy, and the effect is to make the reader feel that he is a part of the investigation. The story is a masterpiece of detective fiction, and it is a pity that it is so little known.

Quickly Kennedy seized the wheel and drove the boat out. He was not alone. A few moments later, he was joined by a man who was a friend of his. The two men were in a hurry, and they did not stop to talk. They were going to a place where they knew they would find the answer to the mystery. The boat was small, but it was fast, and it was able to make good time. The two men were in luck, for they found what they were looking for.

There was now no trace of the man who had been with them. The wind had died, and the water was calm. The two men were alone, and they were in a strange place. They were in a small boat, and they were in the middle of a large body of water. They were in a place where they had never been before, and they were in a place where they did not know what to do.

As we came near the thing, he saw a small boat in the distance. It was a small boat, and it was in the middle of a large body of water. It was a small boat, and it was in the middle of a large body of water. It was a small boat, and it was in the middle of a large body of water. It was a small boat, and it was in the middle of a large body of water.

Kennedy turned the boat over. On the top was the seal of one of the great powder manufacturers. An explosive, he thought, and he was right. He was in a place where he had never been before, and he was in a place where he did not know what to do.

Kennedy shook his head. "If it had been," he answered quickly. "The box would have been destroyed. But it hasn't even been opened. I think I'll take it along and study it." The Black Menace, almost cornered, had made good again his escape. There was nothing to do but put back into the boat and wait for the next move.

Kennedy placed the box in the car, and, far more slowly than we had made the trip out, we returned to Henton Hills. By this time it was dark, but we were naturally eager to learn what had happened to the Mystery Mansion. As we approached we could see that it had been reduced to a pile of ruins. There was no sign of a house, and there was no sign of a man.

There was no use now to search for the man who had been with them. We made inquiries of those who were still about. Very little seemed to be known about the place. In a community where estates were measured by acres and social position was determined by the number of servants, it was not remarkable that this house should have been able to exist without attracting any undue attention.

It had been a long time since the people here, finally reported one of the operatives from the city who seemed to be more intelligent than the rest. "What happened?" he asked. "A joint?" "Why?" returned Kennedy. "What did you hear?"

Nothing very much, but I heard some of the firemen say that there had been some wild parties at the place. They spoke of someone whom they called "the Frenchman." He seemed to be sort of an under cover guy. They didn't know his name. "Consider Jacques," I interrupted. The operative shook his head.

Safe Fat Reduction

Reduce, reduce, reduce, is the slogan of all the people. Get the best of the city of fashion and society. And the over-fat woman, her hands in her pockets, and her head in the clouds, is the most common sight in the city. The cause of this is the lack of a safe and reliable method of fat reduction.

There is a safe and reliable method of fat reduction. It is a method which has been used for many years, and it has been found to be the most effective. It is a method which is safe, and it is a method which is reliable. It is a method which is used by the most successful of the city, and it is a method which is used by the most successful of the city.

BEAUTY CHATS

by Edna Kent Forbes

SMALL BLEMISHES
It always seems a great pity to me that an otherwise attractive girl should have even so slight a disfigurement as a wart or mole on her face. It's more trying really than to have some serious blemish. The great tragedies of life are easily borne, it is the small ones that takes it out of one's temper. Remember the story of Job and the affliction of boils.

A small affliction which is hard to bear is a wart. Children seem to collect them, thereby giving credence to the old tale that hop toads pick up in the hand will bring on a crop of them. With children and sometimes with grown-ups these queer little collections of brown pigment will come as mysteriously as they will disappear. If one has patience time will do the trick, in this as in other cases. However the young girl whose pretty complexion is marred by a wart will die and leave the tissue beneath unmarred. The same treatment applies to moles.

Hope—As your neck and arms are too thin it may be that you are in need of a general building up. Drink plenty of milk and massage the neck and arms with a nourishing oil, such as olive or almond.

Jennie—The plicarpine tonic would be suited to your needs. It is an excellent tonic for anyone turning gray prematurely as it acts upon the cap or secretion. This cannot be printed at this time but the formula will be mailed to you upon receipt of a. s. c. repeating your request.

HEART AND HOME

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am 19 years old and I have never gone with a fellow "steady." My boy friends have other girls and seem perfectly willing for me to have other boy friends. There is a young man at church who has been going with me for almost a year now, but he also goes with another girl at church. Sometimes he seems to like me better and sometimes he doesn't. I am supposed to be friends, but in truth I don't feel very friendly toward her because she does such mean things.

Last Sunday he asked if he might walk home from church with me. Just as we were ready to start, she came along and said she would walk with me. About a block from our house she turns in another direction and I learned that he started there for dinner, went walking with her in the afternoon and then they went to church together in the evening.

You will probably think I am foolish to worry, but it hurts me terribly when he goes with that other girl.

GRAIN
Weekly Grain Review.
Chicago.—Unusually at times in regard to weather, the market has been somewhat higher in price this week. Compared with the week ending Nov. 4, the market has advanced from 1/2¢ to 1 1/2¢, with wheat varying from 1/2¢ to 1 1/2¢, oats ranging from 1/2¢ to 1 1/2¢, and provisions showing a rise of 25¢ to 50¢.
Wheat.—Traders kept sharp watch on aggressive action by the Turks and on consequent disquieting reports of a possibility of a military struggle of a large scale, increased purchasing power, which at one time quickly drove the market up, but which later appeared to come mainly from houses with eastern connections and was responsible for a decline in the market. However, the market has been brought back to a new high price record of the season. Subsequent gossip, however, that the Turkish situation had been cancelled, brought something of a reaction in sentiment and prices as well.
Corn.—The market has been in a hand from Canada and Argentina was deemed of considerable importance. Wheat, and in this connection it was said Argentina had sold wheat to Italy at 10¢ per bushel, and to the United States at 10¢ per bushel. A notably bullish showing by the government crop report, which was to be checked up in the wheat market during the last half of the week.
Barley.—The market for the 1922 crop was almost 700,000,000 bushels in excess of the 1921 crop. The market was in a hand from Canada and Argentina was deemed of considerable importance. PIONEER SAW FORT ATKINSON DEVELOP

Late Mrs. Edward Rankin
Lived There When Indians Were Numerous.

(Special to this Gazette.)
Fort Atkinson.—Early history of the now prosperous city of Fort Atkinson, when there were no houses here and there was nothing but a dense forest, is being developed by the late Mrs. Edward Rankin, who lived there when the city was founded. Mrs. Rankin, who is now 87 years old, is the daughter of the late Mr. Rankin, who was one of the first settlers in the city and had lived there since she was three years old when her parents came here from Vermont. She was born near Burlington, Vt., Jan. 25, 1835.

Mrs. Rankin took the land from the government on which the family now stands. It is a beautiful piece of land, and she has lived there ever since. She has seen the city grow from a small settlement to a large city, and she has seen the Indians who lived there when she was a child.

Mrs. Rankin has a large collection of Indian artifacts, and she has written a book about the Indians who lived there. She has also written a book about the history of Fort Atkinson, and she has been very helpful in the development of the city.

INDIANS ADMIRER GIRLS

Mrs. Rankin recalled many of her childhood experiences at a talk given at a meeting of the Tuesday club of which she was a charter member. She and her daughter, daughter of Dwight Foster, were accustomed to play together along the river bank and it was no uncommon occurrence to see large numbers of Indians.

INDIANS CONSIDERED HARMLESS

From the point of view of the Blackhawk war and the sight of Indians filled the majority of the white settlers with fear although as a rule they were harmless. It was no uncommon occurrence to see large numbers of Indians.

New Enterprises Do Not Come Into a City Where Local Firms are Having Poor Success

If you were selecting a city in which to open up a new business, what would you consider? The very first thing which would make a good or bad impression upon your mind would be the success with which the firms already in that city were meeting. If that city had business houses struggling along on a "hand-to-mouth" basis, you would not give it a second thought. On the other hand, if the city has thriving, bustling, busy, concerns, you will give it long and studied consideration. But remember, that the success of business houses is determined by the support they receive from the public. This is true of Janesville manufacturers. If Janesville people will not support Janesville enterprises, how can Janesville ever expect to get new ones?

Dorothy Phillips in "Hurricane's Gal."

The stage at the Myers will be busy next week, on Monday, with "Her Temporary Husband," and on the following three days with "The Jollies of 1922" by the Jollies club.

The Beverly theater is finding the continuous program an excellent way to care for larger crowds on Sunday. Shows are started at 2 p. m. and run continuously until 11 p. m. at night.

House Peters has an excellent vehicle in "Human Hearts." As the village blacksmith, well liked by the community, he portrays a strong character in a vivid way. His heavy build, large and strong features, are excellently suited for a character of this nature. In addition, the story is one that is true to life, with complications that many people run up against, whether in a small or large city.

"Human Hearts," a stage success of a generation ago, was written by Hal Reid, father of the present day screen star, Wally Reid. It enjoyed one of the most phenomenal runs in the history of the stage of that period and had as high as twelve road companies out at one time. In the screen version House Peters plays the leading role and the excellence of his performance fully justifies his selection for the important and extremely difficult part of Tom Logan.

In "Human Hearts" Tom Logan is a simple, lovable son of the Ozark Mountains, who goes about the world with a wonderful confidence in mankind. A woman comes into his life, a girl named Barbara, who is the daughter of a rich coal miner. She is a girl who plans to gain control of his rich coal lands. She wins him and then makes him miserable. Finally, after a long and painful struggle, she is driven out of his life. The supporting cast is of exceptional merit, including such players as Edith Haller, George Hackathorne, Mary Phillips, Russell Simpson, and others.

At the Myers. The stage attractions at the Myers theater this season are of very high quality. If nothing else, "Her Temporary Husband," then, only this week, a mystery play and thriller, and now on Monday, will come a serious comedy, "Her Temporary Husband." This play, which is a new production of the Chicago theater for months, has an interesting story, permitting many complications and humorous situations. The play is a comedy of the "man of straw" type, which is a story of a man who is a temporary husband to a woman who is a temporary wife. The play is a comedy of the "man of straw" type, which is a story of a man who is a temporary husband to a woman who is a temporary wife.

HOUSE PETERS in "HUMAN HEARTS" A UNIVERSAL JEWEL

Johnston opens law offices here. A new entry into the legal profession of Janesville is seen this week with the opening of offices in the new building by Joseph H. Johnston, graduate of the law course at the University of Wisconsin. Mr. Johnston, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Johnston, town of Rock, graduated from the local high school in 1918 and passed the state bar examination in July, 1922. While at Madison he served two years as justice of the peace and spent his spare time studying in the offices of Crownhart & Wyllie. The past year he has been traveling in the New England states and later in Minnesota, representing a New York law book firm.

BUILDING DEPT HAS RECORD WEEK

Permits Issued for Two Largest Projects Since Code Passed.

All records for building permits were broken in Janesville this week, when the building inspection division issued papers for the two largest private projects started here since the building ordinance was passed. Both were issued to the Chevrolet Motor company for a brick and steel fireproof building on industrial avenue for the Fisher Body company, and the other for an addition to the assembly plant.

The issuance of the permits, while a more formal work having been started several weeks ago, marks what is predicted to be a new era for Janesville.

A third unusually large permit for the past week was that issued to the Standard Oil company for erection of a $10,000 combined garage and warehouse, 52 by 76, on the north side of State street, near the Chevrolet plant. The Standard Oil company, 211-213 State street, will do the work. A monster storage tank has just been erected on the property.

Other permits recorded in the weekly review are: J. F. Newman, garage, 45 by 15, 1218 Milton avenue; J. J. Cunningham, addition and alterations, 14-16 South River street; J. W. Echlin, remodeling, 447 North Terrace street.

Auction Bridge

The best theory of Auction yet developed by the best players is to give exact information whenever possible. With this idea in view they have restricted all bids to one meaning. This is particularly true of the original suit bid. Rather than deceive partner as to the character of their hand, they prefer to pass and await another chance to bid. An original suit bid by third or second hand always conveys the information either that the bidder has two quick tricks in the suit bid or else one quick trick in that suit and one in an outside suit. The requirements, therefore, for an original suit bid by first or second hand are: first, a five card suit; second, with two quick tricks, such as A K, K Q J, or A Q J, in the suit bid; or third, one quick trick in the suit bid, such as Ace, or KQ, and an outside quick trick, such as an Ace or K Q.

With such factors, the hand is worth at least four tricks with suit bid as trump. With the three requirements above noted kept in mind, the following hands illustrate the principles involved:

Hearts—10, 9
Clubs—A, K, J, 6
Diamonds—7
Spades—K, J, 10, 9, 8, 7

With this type of hand it is much better to bid the Club as the original bid, and bid the Spade on the second round. If the bidder holds two four card suits, each headed by A K, the better bid is a No Trump. The hand is too strong for a suit bid of one. Please note that all of the above hands are only to original suit bids by first or second hand.

Diamonds—A, 4, 2, (1 quick trick)
Spades—J, 4

The last hand should not be bid. The requirement as to two quick tricks is present but the suit is too weak. This is a border-line hand and no suit as weak as this hand should be bid, unless holding more than one outside trick.

Certain four card suits may be bid, such as A, K, Q, 4 or K, Q, J, 10, without any outside tricks. Suits such as A, K, 4, 2, K, Q, J, 4, or A, Q, J, 8, should not be bid without at least an outside trick preferably an Ace. Four card suits may also be bid if hand contains a strong secondary bid, that is, a suit that can be bid on the second round for bidding. For example:

Hearts—10, 9
Clubs—A, K, J, 6
Diamonds—7
Spades—K, J, 10, 9, 8, 7

With this type of hand it is much better to bid the Club as the original bid, and bid the Spade on the second round.

Mike Collins' Story

Inner Life of Irish Hero Told by Body Guard.

OF HIS BODYGUARD

(Copyright 1922, by The World-View News Service, Inc., Boston, Mass.)

CHAPTER III

A Close shave.

The Englishman, the Irish superstitious people, but that only means they are able to believe many true things that an Englishman cannot. In the heart of him, however, one thing the boys who followed Michael Collins came to believe was that he could grow his moustache and hair almost at will. It seemed to some of us that he was clearing away the close-cropped one day and growing a noticeable real moustache and long, wavy hair on the next.

He said himself that his beard and hair grew quickly, but many who were close to him, besides myself, thought that something approaching the miraculous belonged to this faculty he possessed. One day he was asked how he managed to grow his hair so fast. He said it was a miracle, and for holding to the point in an argument that followed: so after that I said no more.

It was a mighty handy thing for a man with a price on his head to be able to grow a moustache as quickly as Michael could. It was the police who were more than all the different names he used.

Which reminds me that when he was over in London, a newspaper man who was conversing with him asked: "What name did you use, Mr. Collins, when you were hiding from the police with a reward on your head?" I suppose you made use of a false name at times.

"Romond me when I see you again," Michael replied, with the old merry twinkle in his eye, "and I'll tell you the whole of them."

Of course the newspaper man had to laugh; but everyone had to laugh when Michael Collins felt like laughing himself.

"I'm not about his false names I am writing, however, but about his real moustache. He would be hunted into some house, a clean-shaven man, and after being close for a day or two a man with a well-marked moustache would walk out. That, of course, was not what the police were looking for at all, since the description of the man who had just been identified as Collins dwelt particularly upon the point that he was clean-shaven."

One night we were in a theater at Dublin and Michael was wearing a moustache, when the news was whispered to us that somebody had recognized him, and that the police were surrounding the theater. We ordered us to be calm and quiet, and not let a trigger stir until he gave the word. The play was in progress, you'll understand, and all the house was dark except the stage.

Suddenly he took from his pocket a little pair of scissors and a safety razor, with a shaving outfit he always carried. There he was, then, in the dark and with no way of seeing what he was doing, he had the moustache off and changed coats with a man behind him who wore one of those black raincoats everybody was wearing at the time.

When the time came for us to leave the theater, the R. I. C. men examined everybody, searched and searched in the raincoat with the small, dark moustache, was not to be found. The clean-shaven man in the black raincoat was so much like a score of others that he was allowed to pass almost without question.

Secret of the Hills

The funny part of it all was that while the brains and energy of Dublin Castle were working "double time" to catch Michael Collins, without getting a sight of anything but a bad imitation of him, any Irish child who wanted to could have a word with the popular hero.

It was known beforehand when he was coming to a village, and the children would be drawn up for the rebel "song," "The Irish Boy." After that the boys would come forward, one by one, and tell him what the Black and Tans were doing, and what they had heard the officers saying, and so on when they caught Michael Collins.

In a spot in the hills that I'll not name, even now, there was a hut that used to be used by the moonlighters, and that was one of the places where you could often find the most elusive man in Ireland. Not dozens, but hundreds, visited him there, to tell him the news they had gathered, and boys and girls would be coming and going all the evening or the early morning.

The secret of that place was kept by every man, woman and child that visited it, though the Black and Tans did all in their power to find out where it was. Many stories had got abroad about this hut up in the hills, as there had of all the secret places that Michael used.

The nearest approach the Black and Tans ever got to it was during an ambush. While the operation was in progress, another four lorry loads of them, by chance, came the other way and turned the tables on our own boys, who were taken in, the rear and outnumbered. In the fighting that took place, five officers were killed, including my own cousin, Peter, who led the ambushing party.

Some of those who made their escape took a path that ought to have led them to the place where Michael Collins was hiding, and a party of the Black and Tans, seeing them in flight, made to follow them. At that a boy named Con Hartigan, who was supposed not to have all his name, was there, and he was the one that was missing from him myself, broke from the hands of the two men who were guarding him, and ran to throw himself on the body of my dead cousin Peter.

"Oh, Michael," he cried, with a great, loud wail. "It's dead you are, and them never knowing all the time that they've killed Michael Collins!"

It was that, and a lot more of it, two or three more of the boys who had been taken, took up Con's cry, and began to weep and lament that Michael Collins had been killed. One of the two more of the prisoners denied that the dead man was Michael, which made the English captain all the more willing to believe that it was, as he was very anxious to know.

Michael's Resurrection

People are ready to believe what they want to believe, and the long and short of it was that the moonlighters and the boys who were following back the men who had been taken, led to make some discoveries that would have been awkward for Michael. They all went back to their headquarters, carrying with them the head of the dead body of their cousin Peter to report that they had done for Michael Collins.

For a day or two it was really believed Michael Collins had been killed, and even boys who were of Michael's way of thinking did his best to keep the notion popular. But they soon discovered their mistake.

The report that Collins was dead was never accepted by our own people, but they heard of the trick, and were only too pleased to help it to succeed.

A dash of powder one of the girls applied was enough to whiten his face, and when the agents came, you may be sure they did not take more than one look at the boy in the coat. They were more than a bit surprised to find a second body in one of the bedrooms; but of that there was a ready explanation.

When they had gone, Michael stepped out of the coffin, again, and we put the dead body back in its rightful place, and the funeral service was not many weeks later. It was not many weeks later that the officer who conducted the search was taken prisoner and brought before Michael, who had wanted to see him. "You don't look quite so cheerful as you did when I saw you last," Michael Collins said, in his careless way, his eyes sparkling with the laugh that was behind them.

"I don't remember ever seeing you before," said the Englishman, very cool and stiff. "If I had—"

"You might have taken me for a corpse," Michael said, "like you did the day you looked into Michael Donahoe's coffin."

"So that's why there were two dead bodies!" exclaimed the Englishman, in surprise. "I thought the funeral was rather too well attended. But why do you tell me this?"

"I thought you might like to know," Michael said, "how near you were to supplying the material for a funeral yourself."

Collins As Chauffeur

I've told you about the white horse, and some time I'll tell you the end of the story. I've not told you, though, about the car that Michael used to drive on the roads, and the uniform of an English chauffeur, he used to wear. It wasn't possible, you'll understand, to be driving an empty car up and down the road without being asked questions, especially on the roads of Ireland.

When Michael went out reconnoitering, then, he had to have a passenger to sit in his car, looking stern and giving orders, may be, if there was anybody at hand to hear them. Sometimes I rode in the car myself, and sometimes it was one of the rest of the boys, when I was riding like a lord behind Michael Collins, and I was questioned and examined to make sure that I wasn't Michael himself.

They never thought of running the car, when I was chauffeur, who sat there in front, so stiff in the back and indifferent-looking in the face. But! They must have been wild to get the letter I sent them afterwards saying the man at the wheel was the man they were seeking.

Another day we were driving along a lonely road, and we came up to an English officer, who was walking English style, which he always did as a hint to me to offer the officer a lift. I did so, and he accepted it very civilly. I was supposed to have a friendly chat with him, on the chance that I might get something out of him that would be of use.

But lo and behold, when I set eyes on him, it was the same officer who led the search party at Michael Donahoe's funeral. He grinned when he saw I had recognized him, and said, "careless as could be!"

"I see Michael Collins does his own driving, too?"

"I don't know what you mean," I rejoined.

"Come off it," he said. "Do you think anybody who has been face to face with Michael Collins just when he was looking for him again?"

"You're making a mistake," I insisted.

"No," he replied, "and I'm not going to make one either. I do know nothing. So set me down just when and where you please, and I'll say what you tell me this."

"Thank you nicely to Mr. Michael Collins for the ride."

And that's just what happened, the Englishman thanked Michael by name, and Michael accepting the thanks with a little laugh.

(Another fine installment of the amazing life story of Michael Collins appears in the Week-End issue of the Gazette Nov. 11-12.)

FOX RIVER BOAT IS DESTROYED BY FIRE

Oshkosh.—The steamer Valley Queen, formerly the Leander Cheate, owned by A. L. Knapp of Oshkosh, Wis., was destroyed by fire of unknown origin, Friday at its dock at the Fox River here. It was valued at $13,000 and insured for $7,500. Last year it was built 15 years ago. Knapp, the remodeler, had a passenger car, a dining hall and excursion steamer. Recent fire had burned the car, the dining hall and the excursion steamer, leaving the hull and engine intact. The fire was caused by a short circuit in the Fuller-Goodman company, causing a loss of several hundred dollars to that concern.

Speculators Have Complete Control of Week's Stocks

New York — Professional speculators were in complete control of this week's stock market, prices in which saw-sawed up and down with traders selling stocks on the rallies and repurchasing them on the reactions awaiting indications of a definite market trend. The same irregularity prevailed in the bond market which was featured by the weakness of the European securities.

Further improvement was shown during the week in domestic business and the industrial situation. Steel production is now back to 75 percent of capacity. October pig iron production was 25 percent over that of the preceding month, the daily output reaching the highest average of any month since December 1921. This increase was regarded as highly constructive because the pig iron production has had in determining trade conditions for months ahead.

Railroad carloadings for the last week in October, the latest date for which statistics are available, showed an increase of 33,000 cars over the highest for any previous corresponding week and within striking distance of the record week for all time, the second week in October, 1920.

Capital readjustment of large industrial companies was continued on a large scale during the week, but it failed to excite the speculative enthusiasm aroused by the standard oil distributions a few weeks ago. A sharp reaction which followed the first few announcements, apparently had a deterrent effect on vigorous bullish demonstrations in the shares of companies which have recently announced stock dividends.

SATURDAY MARKS 11TH ANNIVERSARY OF GREAT CYCLONE

November 11 will never pass in Rock county without reviving in the minds of the older residents the terrible cyclone of Nov. 11, 1911 which swept through the county, killing nine people, wrecking homes, devastating farms and causing a general property loss of close to $1,000,000. Today marks the eleventh anniversary of the catastrophe.

Many of the ruins of the cyclone are still visible north of the city and pictures of the scene and parts of the wreckage are on exhibit in the state historical museum at Madison. Janesville and the people of the state in general were quick to provide relief and through the Gazette $1,000 was raised for the sufferers, besides great quantities of food, clothing and furniture which were donated.

The Totem of Black Hawk

By EVERETT McNEIL

The cause was of short duration. From the first there had been no hope for Gideon. He made a swift run, a brave, strong fight, for a boy; but before he had gone 20 rods, he was overtaken by a dozen warriors and pulled to the ground, still fighting with every ounce of strength in his vigorous young body, and before he was completely subdued, there were many warriors who would carry on their faces and bodies for many days the marks made during his brief but furious struggle, but his hard fist, or the club he had caught up.

Leaping Deer had taken no part in the chase of Gideon. The boy was not his prisoner and he cared little what became of him. He was Mike Girty's prisoner. Let Mike Girty take care of his own. But Mrs. Clay and Ruth and the baby were his prisoners. They had surrendered directly to him, and the appeal of their surrender had touched the rude chivalry of his wild nature. He had no intentions of deserting them now, and, consequently, he took advantage of the confusion and the excitement caused by the sudden outbreak of Gideon to hurry to their sides.

Mrs. Clay stood, clasping the baby tightly to her bosom, her eyes fixed in horror and anguish on the mass of yelling savages surging around the spot where she had last seen Gideon. She did not see the approach of Leaping Deer, she did not know that he was near, until he spoke.

"No afraid," he said, drawing his tall form up in front of Mrs. Clay and Ruth, "Indians no hurt. You prisoners of Leaping Deer." Mrs. Clay, at his words, turned quickly to him, and when she saw who he was, she caught him frantically by the arm.

It was a moment before the anglish-stricken woman comprehended the full import of Girty's words, and then, with a moaning cry of outraged mother love, she threw herself at the feet of Girty and begged him to spare her boy.

Girty grinned down at her for a moment in vindictive triumph, and then he deliberately drew back his foot and kicked her, hard enough to tumble her over backward.

At the sight of this brutal act the blood surged hot through Gideon's veins. At the same moment he felt the grips on his arm relax a little; and, suddenly throwing all the strength of his muscular young body into the effort, he wrenched his arms free from the holds of the two warriors, and before a hand could stop him, leaped at Girty and struck, with all the might of his powerful young arm, straight at the red, grinning face.

Gideon, although but a little over sixteen years old, was unusually large and strong, and now rage doubled his strength. His fist struck Girty squarely in the right eye, and the man went down like an ox hit with an ax in the hands of a strong man. The next instant a dozen warriors had leaped upon Gideon and had borne him to the ground; and before he was again allowed to stand on his feet, his hands were securely bound behind his back.

Mike Girty, at first hardly comprehending what had struck him, arose slowly and slowly to his feet and glared wildly around. His eyes fell on Gideon, who, with his hands bound behind him, had just been jerked to his feet—and Mike Girty knew what had hit him!

"For a moment he looked as if he were about to spring upon the boy and tear him to pieces, and he took a couple of swift steps toward him. Then he stopped and grinned. He knew a better way to avenge the blow!"

"The him few th' tree," he commanded. "Pile th' wood up high round him. Th' light th' fire with my own hand," and he strode to the tree and saw that the unfortunate boy's body and arms and legs were firmly bound to the trunk, and superintended the placing of the wood brought by the willing hands of squaws and boys, in the meantime taunting and insulting Gideon in every possible way that his heathen ingenuity could suggest.

Gideon never answered him a word, but a gleam of satisfaction came into his eyes every time they caught sight of the rapidly swelling and blackening eye of Girty.

NEW ALDERMAN TO BE NAMED, MONDAY

Successor to Hemmens Due to be Elected at Regular Meeting of Council.

While last Tuesday was regular election day throughout the country, the coming Monday will be election day so far as members of the city council are concerned, for it is up to them on that night to elect a new alderman from the second ward to fill out the unexpired term of Alvin L. Hemmens. Mr. Hemmens resigned two weeks ago because of moving out of the ward and the council is required to fill the vacancy.

Several names of possible successors have been mentioned, with Louis Kerstel, former alderman from the Second, looming up as the logical candidate. It was Mr. Kerstel whom Hemmens defeated in the election last April, when the managerial form of government will become effective and the present council will go out of existence. Action is expected to be taken at the meeting Monday night on the claim of Mrs. Mary Herdendorf for $5,000 asked of the city for injuries suffered in a fall on an East Milwaukee street sidewalk. One knee cap fractured, Mrs. Herdendorf fears she may never be able to bend the knee again and any she has no money to pay doctor bills.

The council is also expected to take up the recommendation of the city plan commission in reference to extending the second business district several hundred feet on Western avenue, west of South Jackson street. It is predicted this amendment to the zoning ordinance will be passed without opposition.

Routine business will be disposed of, including the monthly reports of the city clerk and treasurer, municipal court, police department, sanitary inspector, health officer, visiting nurse, board of education, and city sealer.

Constabulary in Wisconsin, Plan of State Senator

Madison—Establishment of a Wisconsin state constabulary will be asked of the 1923 legislature in a bill to be introduced by Senator William L. Smith of Neillsville. Senator Smith says that he intends to propose creation of a state police force to take over the duties of game wardens, and to enforce state highway laws and help in the enforcement of prohibition.

This is the first time suggestion has been made for a state constabulary in Wisconsin. It is the opinion of the Neillsville senator that state police are needed to bring more effective enforcement of prohibition and especially to enforce highway laws outside of the incorporated cities and villages.

"This suggestion will probably cause an explosion in administration circles, but nevertheless, this state needs a police force similar to that in some of the other states of the nation," Senator Smith said.

KVALE WINS OUT BY 12,000 MAJORITY

St. Paul—Representative A. J. Volstead of the seventh Minnesota district, author of the prohibition enforcement act, was beaten by more than 12,400 votes, virtually complete returns from Tuesday's election show. With only one precinct missing in the district, Rev. O. J. Kvale, independent, polled 41,522 votes and Representative Volstead 28,071.

Routine business will be disposed of, including the monthly reports of the city clerk and treasurer, municipal court, police department, sanitary inspector, health officer, visiting nurse, board of education, and city sealer.

TAYLOR'S FIGURES FOR '22 ACCEPTED

Equalization Committee Passes Assessments as Fixed—Up to County Board.

Taxes for Rock county will be made on a basis of $120,000,000, if the action of the equalization committee, meeting Friday at the court house, is confirmed by the county board at its sessions the first of the week. The committee accepted, intact, Assessor F. A. Taylor's report, changing only the total for a basis, making it $120,000,000 instead of $125,375,422, as a convenience in making the rates, and yet sustaining the reports of the various assessors of the county. The action is a mere matter of form, and will not raise or lower the taxes.

Lathers Asks Cut Little disagreement came up at the all-day sessions of the committee. In the afternoon, W. J. Lathers, Turtle, moved that the report be adopted with the amendment that a total of $6,600,000 be taken off the total of the villages and towns.

"The assessment on all of them is too high," he said, "and we feel that now is the time to lower them."

After considerable discussion, in which it was pointed out that once an amount be taken off the assessment of one town or village, all would want equal or larger amounts removed from their total. That would cause a re-assessment of the entire county.

"Well, perhaps a reassessment wouldn't do the county any harm," Mr. Lathers said, and was told that such an action would without doubt bring the assessment still higher than it is now.

The motion was lost.

Members of the committee accepted the report as it stood, with discussion on some of the more important matters. Chairman Marshall P. Richardson felt that the assessment for Janesville banks should be lower, as it is now $1,395,000 to Beloit's $400,000.

"I don't see how this can be, with Beloit having 4,000 more people," he said.

He was told that the three large industrial plants of that city are all out-of-town concerns, doing little business except cashing checks with the Beloit banks, that the banks held down their capitalization, and that one of them—the Savings bank—was exempt, because of its being a mutual concern, where there were no profits, except to the depositors.

It was also mentioned that stock in Beloit banks is sold so seldom that the market price cannot be determined, while for the Janesville banks, while the price is probably as high, sales are frequent, and stock is assessed on its price at the last sale.

THE BUSINESS OF FARMING DAIRY—FARM BUREAU—LIVE STOCK

SUGGEST STANDARD FOR BLOODED STOCK

Danger of Having Too Many Scrub Thoroughbreds in Pedigree Trade.

(BY ROCK-CO-WIS.)
Two prominent Rock county Holstein breeders were discussing the future of the pedigree trade when they suggested and considered the need of setting standards among purebred cattle, especially the dairy types. Their views were not a "knock" against blooded animals, rather a boost to improve pure-breds. There are scrub pure-breds as well as scrub grades and cross-breeds in the cattle business.

At some future date it is almost certain that some regulations that will prevent the registration of blooded cattle unless they meet the breed requirements.

Obtain Wrong Opinion.
One of the paramount points necessary for the proper development of Rock or any other county is the elimination of scrub bulls. But at the same time it is equally important to accept a policy whereby the breeders obtain good pure-bred sires to enable them to build a herd. Any purebred sire, it is said, will improve a grade herd, but it takes a good sire to improve a pure-bred herd. It is not to buy a blooded bull simply because they are registered, unless they have reasonably good type and production back.

The owners of many grade herds obtain adverse and wrong impression of blooded cattle from the fact that many farmers do not carry out a selective and progressive policy of herd development. "Too many" breeders have the notion that it is sufficient just to have pure-breds. They advance the sales argument that "if it is registered, it is not enough."

Two experienced Short-horn breeders were visiting the farm of a young man who had a young bull he was considering buying with his prize heifers. The older breeders looked the bull over and had this to say: "Don't use that bull, he has not enough type to compare with the heifers. You would be years breeding out the faults. He would carry into your herd. Get a sire better than the heifers. This bull is weak in the heart girth, is the hardest part of a cow to improve by breeding. It takes years to correct a fault that can be prevented by using only good sires."

There are herds that carry certain weaknesses directly due to faulty sires. If the pedigree trade is to continue and increase in importance—which it will without a doubt—then it may be necessary to set stricter standards. It is poor policy to push along blooded animals that are a plain disgrace to the registered trade. Blooded animals still hope and ambitions in the farmers' just starting and if they are not good pure-breds, the farmer's faith in better blood will be broken.

Because of the fact there are "scrub pure-breds" there is a danger of too many of them being palmed off at premium prices. Unless the foundation stock carry the necessary type and production powers to improve and make more profit, the purebred business is on a rocky foundation.

Certainly blooded stock must be an improvement over grades in production powers and selling price or there is no advantage in raising pure-breds.

Therefore, it is good policy for Rock county farmers to buy "good pure-breds" or none at all, especially at the present time. Good quality of protection there may come a time when every pure-bred dairy cow shall be tested. Unless the foundation stock carry the necessary type and production powers to improve and make more profit, the purebred business is on a rocky foundation.

Rock county should not have a scrub bull on any of her farms. But by the place of the scrub bull, the farmers do not want scrub pure-breds. It is better to have a herd of 16 head that will carry type that makes off-spring sell well, and production ability that pays, than 40 that will not pay either at the milk pail or the auction block.

Low Prices Paid
At Duroc Auction
Of Spring Boars

Spring boars offered by E. H. Parker and son together with J. J. McCann and sons for an average of $25 at the auction held at the Rock county fair grounds on Monday afternoon, November 13. The boars did not bring much more than their actual value.

There were five top-notch animals offered which sold above $25. The top of the sale was made by the Parker herd, sired by Jack's Big King and sold to J. F. Probst, Arlington Heights, Ill., for $40. R. H. Bles, Janesville, bought one of the best animals offered. There were 22 sold.

There are many good boars in the county of all types. The best of them have the advantage of low prices and a big selection. No farmer can afford not to use a blooded sire at the present scale of prices.

WATKESHA SALE.
Many Rock county farmers will attend the Holstein sale to be held in Watkesha county on Monday, November 13. In connection with the sale there is to be a round-up and a Holstein demonstration in the pavilion. Live head will be sold among which are listed, many high test cattle.

MAKING PLANS FOR 1923 SHOW CIRCUIT

Rock County Breeders and Grain Growers Back of County Displays.

By LEWIS C. FRENCH.
"Have something for the Rock county display in 1923!"

Rock county farmers in general are looking ahead for the future. They are looking for the success of the county on the show circuit. They are looking for the program to win the county sweepstakes dinner at the state fair.

"The time to start preparing is right now," declared one breeder. "I did not have a thing in this year but I have a couple head on my farm if they are good enough, I want Rock county to use them. I believe in this county 'show herd plan.' The speaker was a Guernsey breeder and his stock was just good enough that a neighboring county wanted to 'borrow' the stock for showing. He refused keeping them for his own county."

Each farmer have stock eligible for entry at the fairs is urged to make plans this winter for showing next year. Half the success of the county is in fitting and feeding. Regardless of the breed Rock county must have an exceptional exhibit to win back the blue banner. All breeds should be kept in the best condition possible.

It is safe to say that Rock county has been advertised and become better known in the last year than in any other 10 years. Magazines have published good reports of the success of Rock county and the central-southern Wisconsin district. It is good logic and business to get into print regarding the merits of this district and Rock county. The more attention that is centered in Rock county and its neighbors, the more business the county and district will enjoy.

Trips around the county show that many farmers are "keeping an eye" open for stock that will warrant displaying. This year the county show herd was run with such a success that no other local exhibitor could exhibit his stock in the county herds even though they did not pay full expenses in premiums.

From the start to the finish, county show herds are a disappointment. It is "Rock County" regardless of whether the stock comes from Janesville, Beloit or Evansville.

One thing that must not be overlooked is a representative display of grains and seeds. The county board will be asked for Rock county to have a booth for Rock county at the state fair. In this booth are shown the seeds, grains, fruits and all farm products for which the county is noted. Certainly Rock county should have a booth for it is after should have a booth for the thousands of visitors walk through the county building at the fair and not see Rock county represented.

The plan proposed is to have a live or more farmers known for their ability to produce good seed, corn or grains help in preparing this exhibit. To illustrate, John Doe, Janesville, will be held responsible for the production of a sample of oats, William Smith, Clinton, several varieties of corn, and another, ray or barley. One man to have a great number of exhibits.

Rock has several of the best grain growers in the state and the good seeds produced here should be advertised. It means returns for the farmer. It means returns for the farmer. It means returns for the farmer.

One often the trouble with such plans is that one or two "over-enthusiastic" farmers take advantage and attempt to absorb all the business and the advertising. A county showing at any fair, at least should be a serious attempt to gain a better reputation for the entire county, not a chosen few.

Association business must be distributed so that a large number of farmers enjoy the results of the association will fail. Also farmers must cooperate to assure that they obtain their fair share of the good results.

Every farmer in Rock county is urged to take an active interest in production of livestock or field products that will represent Rock county to a good advantage in 1923.

Don White farm and secured data and pictures for an article in Hoard's Dairyman. Mr. Graber stated that Rock County is using as much limestone as practically all of southern Wisconsin.

The three other limestone pulverizers owned by the Farm Bureau are crushing limestone for the farmers. The one in the vicinity of Evansville is being operated by the farmers. Orrie Steele, Evansville, has ground 240 tons and purchased 60 tons. He states that he has only about 30 acres more of land on his farm to cover with limestone.

John Robinson, the Hereford breeder, near Evansville, has also used around 300 tons of limestone in the last two years. The farmers in the vicinity of Evansville appreciate what lime will do for them and practically every one is on the market for more limestone.

Shorthorn Owners To Meet Wednesday To Name Officers

Shorthorn breeders of Rock county will be called together on Wednesday afternoon, November 14, in the court house to elect officers and perfect the organization of a Shorthorn cow testing association. Eleven breeders have been contacted for the association and others wishing to join are requested to make known their names at once.

Organization of this breed association is certain to aid in the making of better dual purpose herds in Rock county and making the cattle more valuable. A sires experienced in the feeding and care of Shorthorns has been obtained and is ready to start once the organization is underway. The meeting has been called by President Harvey Little. All farmers interested in Shorthorn cattle are urged to attend the Wednesday's meeting.

Rock County Fed Herefords to Sell For Xmas Roasts

Considerable Rock county corn is being made into beefsteak this season. Bert Austin, Johnston, is feeding 204 S. M. and J. S. steers. These are the celebrated Swenson Brother Herefords from Texas. They show what good bulls will do for range cattle.

Austin expects to sell his Herefords some time before the holidays and then he plans on putting in another bunch of the same kind of cattle for spring feedings.

At Least a Quart of Milk per Day per Child

That is the allowance, food authorities say should govern every household. Every mother wants her children to lead in play, to be eager for errands, and smart in school. The greatest scientists in this country have been studying the problem of feeding children economically, and to make them healthy and strong.

The Milk Way Is the Health Way

Milk has been proved the economy food. It is economical because a child gets more strength from a quart of milk than could be gained from other foods at far greater cost. Milk is easily digestible—the perfect food for children.

Use liberal supplies of milk in your household. Let the children have plenty of butter, cheese and ice cream. These are made from milk—they contain the same energy elements. The U. S. Food Administration urges mothers to feed milk liberally.

"Every household in which there are children should have milk in abundance."

That is a quotation from a government bulletin. It proves how necessary is milk. The necessity of keeping your children fit is a patriotic duty—and remember—

AT LEAST A QUART OF MILK PER DAY MAKES CHILDREN HEALTHY, ROMP AND PLAY

Use Milk in Every Edible Way
Eat More Cheese—More Butter—More Ice Cream.
Refuse Substitutes!

Children need milk for their growing bones. Milk contains all the strength-giving, body-building, mind-developing elements in correct proportion.

Milk is Nature's first food—and it has proved man's best food. Nothing can take its place.

of affairs is becoming less and less possible.

We could go on piling up testimony. Suffice it to say that thinking business men are all agreed that costs must occupy a larger and more important place than ever before. The old days of "hunch" and "guess" are over. In the face of the world-wide changes, and an ever increasing tide of competition, more and more facts are needed. The business man of today must know. He cannot expect to win merely by the willingness to buy and sell. He must know the conditions of buying and selling. For him, the knowledge of the profit and loss that exists in each class of merchandise handled is as important as his ability to secure goods for sale. The real problem of every man in business, and of every corporation in business, is to have enough money coming in to pay debts and leave something over for profit, and the only way he can do that is to know what his costs really are. It is not enough that we should scrutinize our books to make sure that there are no errors or fraud, and that every cent has been accounted for. We should examine our books to determine what it costs us to do business, not alone for all sales but for each specific kind of sales—dig down to the roots of the matter, discover ratios, trends and tendencies—in short, measure all the forces both internal and external that are involved in our business. Copyright 1922 by G. W. Ratner

WEEKLY FINANCIAL REVIEW

HAFNER'S TALKS
TO BUSINESS MENBy G. W. HAFNER,
Industrial Engineer.

A man came into the Chicago Board of Trade a number of years ago with a wet umbrella. An operator on the floor of the wheat pit nudged his neighbor. The latter passed the word along to somebody else, and a rumor was born which flew from lip to lip. Not all the traders present saw the wet umbrella, but everybody heard the rumor word. There had been a protracted drought, and rain meant more wheat, and more wheat meant lower prices. The operator who first saw that wet umbrella signalled to sell wheat. The man standing next to him signalled to sell wheat. Pandemonium broke loose on the floor with scores of operators wildly trying to sell wheat, when there were no buyers. Only one thing could happen. The bottom dropped out of wheat.

Had the fact been known, the sun was at that very moment pouring down its relentless hot rays over the wheat fields of Kansas and the Northwest, burning up the grain; but this was not known to those who were dealing in the unharvested crop in the Chicago market. A shower in LaSalle street frightened them out of their wits. Their confidence and common sense vanished at sight of a wet umbrella!

Lack of confidence and lack of information sleep in the same bed, locked in the closest kind of embrace. When a man has confidence he gets along swimmingly in business; without confidence he gets nowhere at all. But confidence is the Son of Vision, and stirs by information. It would be a wonderful thing for American industry and trade, and for profits, and for the peace of mind of every business man, if we would replace all the wet umbrellas with FACTS; if we could substitute information for guesswork.

Isn't it a strange thing how the average business man places a greater reliance in what his competitor does than in his own judgment? He seems to be intent on catching sight of a wet umbrella. As you get out and around in the commercial world, you see all kinds of men craning their necks to see what kind of an umbrella the other fellow carries. They are not looking ahead; they are looking around.

Smith, for example, see Jones selling an A-1 grade of patent flour for $7.50 a barrel. "If Jones can do it, I can too," says Smith, and proceeds to cut his price to $7.50. Brown follows Smith, and somebody else follows Brown, until the whole trade lies shattered by the ravages of price slashing, and bread, to death under cut-throat competition.

Observe now! Smith did not know anything at all about why Jones cut his price. He did not know that Jones had a note falling due at the bank, and that he had to get the money to meet it; or that Jones had bought flour at $6.50 the barrel while he, Smith, paid $7.50; or that Jones had got busy and reduced his operating expenses 10 per cent. He is too busy watching Jones does out in the open, where everybody can see, to take a second's thought as to what is going on behind the scenes that make the condition in Jones' business altogether different from his own. He is scared at sight of a wet umbrella.

I know that this will sound strange in many ears, and will be especially startling to those who have considered the subject chiefly with reference to the mere mechanics of buying and selling, but it is an undeniable fact that the average business man of today is chiefly notorious for the manner in which he assumes responsibility without adequate basis for action in the direction of the matters under his authority. Some men suppose that if they can discover the right formula, they will get along well in business; others suppose that if they know enough about what their competitor is doing they will succeed. But all that makes for mob action. It introduces the wet umbrella into business.

In the whole field of business, the difference between the big business man and the small business man—between the success and the failure—may be determined at once by the question of confidence. Confidence is the most important single element in business success today. It is confidence bulwarked by FACTS, that enables a man to go ahead with a plan he believes to be right, even though everybody is against him, and to come through safely with his plan. In the last analysis, then, a knowledge of the facts of your business is the main essential.

Let us call some witnesses: John D. Rockefeller, what have you to say?

"This is the day of System in business. The business man who trusts to chance and circumstance finds his way blocked with those obstacles which, like reefs, have shattered man business wrecks upon their crests."

Chas. M. Schwab, take the stand! "More than one business has found itself in the bankruptcy court, through an unnoticed leak that had free play during a long period. The remedy for this state of affairs is an efficient system of continuous analysis of the operating and financial records of a business."

Thomas A. Edison, what is your testimony?

"Records kept in a haphazard way, or not kept at all, don't mean less office expense; they mean chances missed, sales lost, effort wasted."

General Chas. G. Dawes, banker, soldier, forerunner of the budget for the United States Government—"Hell-Mark! Dawes—knows where of he speaks when he says: "A successful business man must work to the best advantage. And to work to the best advantage, he must know his business. And to know his business, he must have records that place the facts before him."

Herbert Hoover touches the heart of the situation in these words: "When business was less competitive than it is today, business men were satisfied to have an analysis of their financial records made once a year; and not until that analysis was complete had they any real idea of their financial condition, or the results of the year's operations. Under modern competitive conditions such a state

"Your Success"
In This World

Depends a great deal on your ability to save money—

The difference between the successful man and the failure in financial matters is usually the fact that one is systematically thrifty of his time, his energy and his money while the other is not.

Investing a regular amount every month in the Janesville Building and Loan Association is a very satisfactory way to pile up a nice sum through savings and a generous rate of interest.

Then, too—it is a wonderful help in the building of Janesville.

$5.00 per month saved with this association for approximately eighty-four months will amount to $500.

Let us explain this modern saving method.

Maj. John Jacob Astor and Mrs. Astor.

Answering hecklers during a political speech at Dover, Maj. John Jacob Astor, candidate for a seat in the house of commons, declared that he was transferring his wealth from America to England. Major Astor, however, neglected to explain that inasmuch as a large part of the $80,000,000 fortune consists of New York real estate, he may have to move the heart of Gotham over to London and park it near Buckingham palace.

Elizabeth screamed at what she saw when she entered the room on the roof.

'43 Years Old And Head Over Heels In Love!'

"... He showed her his spacious office, back of the little cabinet which was to be her room. It took her breath—its size, the silk and silver; not at all like any law office which she had ever imagined. She bubbled and twinkled over it, prowling around delightedly. And the view from the broad windows took her breath again.

"She and Harwood stood beside one of them looking out at the great view—roofs, roofs, roofs, of all sorts and at all heights, under a haze of smoke which seemed an emanation of enormous energy, millions of people toiling. He pointed out various recognizable objects. She stared her eyes full.

"Her eyes were full of the view as she presently turned to the handsome man beside her. Of course, he hadn't made that smoky immensity beyond the window. But he was one of those who had made it and to whose will it answered—one of the masters of these cluttered, piled up kingdoms of the earth!

"She was not likely to withhold her admiration. Her shining eyes, full of the great view, did not withhold admiration now. With a sudden, heady leap of the blood Harwood felt that he could almost take her into his arms now—almost—almost!"
